

Suspect 4 - Reverend John Bosco

Father John is a very interesting character. Over six feet tall, with a nervous twitch. Eccentric, to say the least.

He was rounded up by Lestrade just today, when he wandered into the crime scene looking for Dr Black, who had apparently missed an earlier appointment with him.

He introduced himself as an Italian priest who runs a church in East London that Dr Black attends regularly. They had arranged to meet yesterday regarding a private confession, but Dr Black did not show up.

"I had a feeling that something was amiss, so came over to look for Dr Black instead. But he was not at home. I then recalled that he had mentioned an important appointment with Mr Holmes last week. So I decided to retrace his steps to see if I could find any clues as to his whereabouts. Clever, eh?"

Father John seemed confident in his investigative abilities and keen to take the matter into his own hands. "Dr Black is an intelligent man. I was just telling the others that Dr Black had left behind a clue to his murderer. The clue we seek is in the study," he claimed excitedly, and in all seriousness.

Indeed. I hope so too. Yet I had a nagging suspicion that Father John was not telling the whole truth to me.

Father John vividly described mischievous beings changing themselves a bit and hiding in his garden. Hence his ongoing efforts to link the poles to fence out Nikoli's Evil Influence. Now if Holmes was around, he would no doubt be able to help advise him on the remaining length of fence he needs in a more logical manner.
